A Message from the President

From its inception, Rice University has had a special relationship with Houston. Rice’s founders, themselves Houstonians, sought a university that would reflect their city’s drive and destiny of greatness. Houstonians long have viewed Rice as a symbol of the city’s commitment to intellectual excellence and a necessary engine for their own progress.

Out of that special city–university relationship have come hundreds of mutually beneficial collaborations that have greatly enriched civic and academic life. In a first attempt to catalogue the spectrum of Rice–Houston engagement, so that the university and city alike might best capitalize on the collaborations, we have created this guide and a more detailed, searchable online database at http://www.rice.edu/engage. We have chosen to take an expansive view of engagement by describing the research efforts of our centers and institutes, as well as the volunteer and service activities of our outreach programs.

We hope you will find this information enlightening and useful. Most of all, we hope you will join us in finding evermore ways to engage Rice and Houston for the benefit of all who live in our great city.

Sincerely,

David W. Leebron
President, Rice University

About Rice University

What makes Rice extraordinary? In less than 100 years, it has achieved a position among America’s great research universities. Even in that category, it is distinctive: Rice is a small great university. That is, while smaller than most, Rice is able to compete with the best in the nation, indeed, in the world. Its comparative advantages lie in its relatively small size, its emphasis on undergraduate education, its identification of important but focused areas of strength, the relative ease by which it can foster interdisciplinary study, and its possibilities for teaching and research excellence across the range of human knowledge and endeavor. All this resides in an extraordinarily beautiful, coherent, and tree-lined campus located in the heart of the cultural district of the nation’s fourth-largest city and just three miles from its downtown.

The Rice academic seal (left) combined the main elements of the coats of arms of 16 prominent families bearing the names Rice or Houston to signify the cooperation of the city of Houston and the Rice Institute.
First Comprehensive Survey of University Engagement

This publication reports the results of the Engaging Houston survey, the first annual comprehensive catalogue of university engagement with Houston. As an ongoing work in progress, the survey will continue to catalogue and describe new and ongoing initiatives at Rice. The survey takes an expansive view of engagement with Houston—describing the research activities of our schools, centers, and institutes, as well as listing volunteer and service opportunities of our outreach efforts. The website (http://www.rice.edu/engage) also attempts to list resources, workshops, courses, and lecture series that may be open to the Houston community. Our goal is to broadly identify the many ways Rice’s resources enrich Houston and vice versa.

The initial survey recorded:

- More than 1.3 million hours of participation in Rice-affiliated activities and programs during the 2004–2005 academic year by groups ranging from high school students and teachers, middle school students and teachers, and international visitors to the general public.

- More than 5,100 Rice faculty, staff, and students participated in community activities, usually on a volunteer basis.

- Rice-affiliated programs and activities occurred at more than 358 off-campus locations, ranging from elementary, middle, and high schools to museums and healthcare institutions.

Rice Faculty, Staff, and Alumni are Leaders in the Houston Community

Beyond the programs and activities listed in this guide, Rice faculty and staff serve in leadership positions on an individual basis throughout the Houston community, from board-level to grassroots volunteering in many of the city’s civic, cultural, religious, political, and scientific organizations.

And more than 13,600 Rice alumni—41 percent of our entire alumni base—reside in Houston, making the university a catalyst for attracting talent to the city and retaining it over time. Rice alumni serve as leaders in many of Houston’s leading corporations, civic organizations, and government entities and understand that the success of Rice is closely linked to the success of Houston. They give of their time and resources to the Houston community by serving in leadership roles in many of the city’s nonprofit and charitable organizations like the United Way of the Gulf Coast; Greater Houston Partnership; Houston Endowment; Houston Hispanic Forum; Alley Theatre; Museum of Fine Arts, Houston; Council on Foreign Relations; and Children’s Hospice Service.

A sampling of volunteer affiliations of Rice employees includes:

- American Cancer Society
- Amigos de las Americas
- Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts of America
- Center for the Healing of Racism
- Child Advocates
- Cultural Arts Council of Houston
- Habitat for Humanity
- Houston Area Urban League
- Houston Area Women’s Center
- Houston Crime Stoppers
- Houston Philosophical Society
- Japanese–American Citizens League
- Junior League of Houston
- Main Street Theater
- National Stuttering Association
- Polish Society of Houston
- Project Row Houses
- Recording for the Blind and Dyslexic
- Rotary Club of Houston
- Soaring Club of Houston
- Society of Building Science Educators
- Special Olympics
- Texas Association of Sports Officials
- Tolkien Society of Houston
- Visual Arts Alliance
- YMCA
A Focus on K–12 Education and Teacher Training

Rice makes one of its most distinctive contributions through K–12 educational outreach, and in particular, teacher training and professional development.

More than half of the efforts described in this guide report involvement with K–12 education, and Rice has at least 90 different educational outreach endeavors. The survey found that more than 891,000 hours were invested by participants of K–12 initiatives, directly or indirectly touching approximately 5,000 K–12 teachers and 100,000 students, stretching from the greater Houston area to the Rio Grande Valley. Rice’s programs have both a local and international reach. Most significantly, our outreach programs work with more than 114 area schools, including many in the Houston Independent School District (HISD). Examples include:

• Rice University School Mathematics Project

The Rice University School Mathematics Project (RUSMP) was established to provide a bridge between the Rice University mathematics research community and Houston area mathematics teachers. Its mission is to help Houston’s K–12 teachers and administrators better understand the nature of mathematics, the effective teaching and assessing of mathematics, and the importance of mathematics in today’s society. With deep relationships with area school districts, including HISD and Aldine ISD, this program has been nationally recognized for its excellence and has recently helped launch a Mathematics Leadership Institute for teachers. Nearly 5,000 teachers have participated in RUSMP programs since its inception in 1987.

• Center for Excellence and Equity in Education

The center promotes greater participation of underrepresented minorities and women in the sciences and seeks to encourage academic excellence for all. Teacher professional development programs like TeacherTECH help teachers encourage the full participation of all students in computer technology and assist teachers in effectively using and producing Web resources to support student learning. In response to a serious shortage of women in computer science and information technology, center programs like GirlTECH and Computer Science Camp work with K–12 teachers, students, and counselors to promote the participation of girls and women in computer science and engineering and to increase the enthusiasm that girls have for studying computer science and computing. The Engineering Bridges program is designed to increase the number of underrepresented minority students who are excited, motivated, and well-prepared to succeed in engineering.

“We are excited about this wonderful opportunity for the teachers selected to participate [in the Mathematics Leadership Institute]. They will work with leading mathematicians from Rice University as well as other high school math teachers from around the city. Introducing new ideas and ways of teaching mathematics will benefit Aldine’s math teachers and, most importantly, our students.”

—Aldine ISD Administrator
“Your contribution helped Girls Inc. serve 40 girls from diverse communities throughout Harris County. Your computer lab helped create a high-tech educational atmosphere for girls, which was conducive to effectively teaching the basic elements of Web design, word processing, spreadsheet development, and graphic presentations. Our combined efforts will continue to help girls view science and technology in new and exciting ways.”

—Girls Inc. Program Manager and GirlTECH partner

• NanoKids

NanoKids is an educational outreach project dedicated to helping K–12 teachers and students experience our world at the nanoscale level through 3-D animated DVDs with original music scores, interactive student workbooks, comprehensive teacher guides, bilingual parent guides, and a support website. Teachers and students learn alongside creative characters such as NanoScholar, NanoTexan, NanoAthlete, and NanoChef and through instructional materials that are developed for all students, including students with English as a second language and from underrepresented minorities as well as participants’ families. NanoKids works with schools in HISD and across Texas to Alabama, Washington, Massachusetts, Indiana, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Kansas, and Michigan as well as with other countries, including Canada, Thailand, Iran, Senegal, Turkey, Venezuela, Portugal, Bolivia, Nepal, Australia, and Switzerland.

“The NanoKids Project contributed to my students learning by taking them from the larger scale to the smaller one in a way that is easily understood. Some of my students were even English as a second language learners, and they used this wonderful program to understand words they never experienced in their past. This program is great on so many levels.”

—HISD teacher

• Rice Advanced Placement Summer Institute

With an 11-year history in teacher professional development programs, the School of Continuing Studies offers specialized workshops and courses for teachers of talented high school students taking Advanced Placement (AP) courses or the International Baccalaureate (IB) curriculum. The Rice Advanced Placement Summer Institute is one of the largest in the country, attracting teachers from Houston, across the nation, and around the globe. It offers courses in 75 subject areas, which connect participants with Rice faculty and experienced AP teachers from throughout the region.

• Center for Education

The Center for Education strives to improve K–12 education by creating new ways for teachers to learn. Through the vision of three scientists and educators at Rice, along with a panel of 14 science teachers, the Model Science Lab was born. At HISD’s Lanier Middle School, science teachers spend an intensive sabbatical year improving their science understanding and instruction. Since it started in 1991, the Model Science Lab has housed six to eight middle school teachers a year as resident teachers. Ninety-three teachers representing schools in HISD have been trained in the lab and have impacted more than 65,000 students in their classrooms.

“Students in classes taught by these teachers improve more on science tests and on the state math test than other students in their respective schools. An equally important result is teacher retention. Teachers are reinvigorated and become focused on a new vision for their students.”

—Center for Education staff member

• Project GRAD (Graduation Really Achieves Dreams)

Project GRAD is a school–community collaborative within HISD developed to increase the graduation and college attendance rates of disadvantaged and underrepresented students in Houston through summer institutes, teacher and staff training, strong parental involvement, and enhanced curricula.

The Rice University Project GRAD Advanced Summer Mathematics Academy is a summer program designed to ensure the success of students in advanced mathematics courses while exposing them to a selective university atmosphere. This past summer, Project GRAD Houston collaborated with the Jones Graduate School of Management to present the Money & Business 101 Summer Institute, a program to introduce students from underserved Houston high schools to the world of business and finance. A testimony to the success and impact of Project GRAD is seen through the Rice student assistant who works with the program—herself a product of Project GRAD.

“She has been and continues to be a phenomenal role model for students in the program, and many students arrive on campus aware of her notoriety of being accepted to Rice and excelling academically. This initiative has a powerful impact on the participants and their parents, who are invited to the campus for a closing program ceremony to celebrate the success of their students.”

—a project administrator

“The primary goal of this program is to change expectations and aspirations. We want to focus on giving these students exposure to business in general, and we want to broaden their expectations of career paths that are possible for them.”

—Money & Business 101 Summer Institute coordinator

• Shepherd School of Music’s JUMP! (Just for U Music Program)

JUMP! offers six free concerts each year at the Shepherd School of Music for K–12 school groups and senior citizens. Created and administered by Shepherd School of Music graduate students, JUMP! offers an interactive and entertaining introduction to classical chamber music. In addition to attending a free concert in the intimate setting of Duncan Recital Hall, some school groups include a campus tour in their visit to Rice. For many, it is their first experience on a college campus.

“This is the fifth time my fifth grade classes have had the opportunity to visit your campus and attend the JUMP! series, and I am thrilled that the project continues. This is such a fine example of what field trips can be—a lasting, positive impression upon our young people. As a teacher, I feel that this program has a great impact on the future of our students. It serves the music education aspect so beautifully, while also introducing our students to expanded possibilities. I have had several instances where my students have specifically cited this field trip as the reference point or turning point for their aspirations in life.”

—Alief ISD teacher

Offering Cultural and Educational Resources to Our Community

Rice offers artistic, cultural, and educational resources to Houston from the Shepherd School of Music to the Baker Institute, from the School of Continuing Studies to the resources of Fondren Library, and from the Rice Art Gallery to the Rice Media Center. The public also is welcomed to lectures, workshops, and special events across Rice’s academic departments.

Shepherd School of Music

One of the nation’s most highly regarded music schools, Rice’s Shepherd School presents 400 events per year, with an estimated audience of 75,000. Its Stude Concert Hall, Duncan Recital Hall, and Edythe Bates Old Recital Hall enjoy outstanding acoustics and attract music lovers from all over Houston.

James A. Baker III Institute for Public Policy

The Baker Institute brings experts from academia, government, media, business, and nongovernmental organizations to campus for the benefit of the university and the city. In addition to events open to the public, live webcasts and webcast archives of Baker Institute lectures and conferences make the resources of the institute available to the community.

School of Continuing Studies

Since 1968, Rice’s School of Continuing Studies has offered the best of academic scholarship and professional expertise to 75,000 to 100,000 Houstonians a year. A wide range of noncredit course topics is offered in the arts, humanities, and sciences, as well as in personal development, foreign languages, English as a second language, information technology, and professional development. In addition, Continuing Studies administers the degree-granting Master of Liberal Studies program.
Fondren Library

Fondren Library makes 2.3 million volumes and more than 36,000 print and electronic journals available to the general public. The Friends of Fondren program also allows Houston community members access to the library's resources through membership, which includes library circulation privileges, The Flyleaf newsletter, and invitations to special events sponsored by the group.

Rice University Art Gallery

Rice University Art Gallery is open to the public, and in 2005 celebrates its 10th anniversary as the only university museum in the country dedicated to installation art. The gallery commissions four to five dynamic site-specific installations each academic year and also features the work of graduating visual arts students at the annual Rice Student Art Exhibition. The gallery also offers informal gallery talks by artists and art professionals; lectures by prominent directors, curators, and others from the art community; tours of installations for school groups at all levels; and special family activity days.

Rice Media Center/Rice Cinema

The Rice University Media Center is the home of film and photography at Rice University. The cinema hosts various film showings, special cultural events, and occasional film festivals that are open to the Houston community.
Entrepreneurship and Scholarship Benefiting Houston

The effort to create intellectual synergies with other Houston institutions can best be seen in our joint efforts with the Texas Medical Center (TMC). The fortuitous proximity of Rice and the TMC research institutions has already led to a significant number of individual collaborations, numbering some 75 programs. We envision an even deeper institutional relationship as we plan a Collaborative Research Center at the corner of University and Main, which will bring biochemistry, bioengineering, basic biology, physical science, computation, medical science, and medical practice together in a way that fosters important collaboration.

Rice scientists and engineers are undertaking critical research on the atmospheric, flooding, and climate challenges facing Houston and other large coastal cities. For example, faculty in Rice’s department of civil and environmental engineering, in collaboration with other universities, have developed a real-time flood alert system for the TMC that has already been tested on major flood events in Houston.

The Rice Alliance for Technology and Entrepreneurship promotes education, research, and collaboration related to technology commercialization and technology entrepreneurship. The Rice Alliance not only nurtures the development of start-up technology companies here in Houston but also promotes economic development in the Houston community. Since its inception in late 1999, the Rice Alliance has supported the launch of more than 160 new technology companies within the community, and these companies have raised more than $300 million in early-stage funding.

Since March 1982, the annual Houston Area Survey has tracked demographic patterns, life experiences, attitudes, and beliefs among successive representative samples residents and has helped this ever-changing city understand and deal with its past, present, and future.

These are among some of the ways that Rice faculty engage with the city to make contributions to Houston through their scholarship and research.

Civic Engagement and Volunteerism of Rice Students

Community Involvement Center

The Community Involvement Center (CIC), housed within the Office of the Dean of Undergraduates at Rice University, seeks to establish a culture of service and an ethic of social responsibility within the university community by developing one-time and ongoing service programs, including Outreach Days, the Urban Immersion Program, the Good Works Volunteer and Career Fair, the English as a Second Language Tutoring Program, the International Summer Service Trip, the America Reads Tutoring Program, the Alternative Spring Break Program, and the Rice Student Volunteer Program.

In addition, the CIC provides an email newsletter, GIVE-A-HOOT, which serves as an effective, cost-efficient, and environmentally friendly means to announce community service opportunities to the Rice community. Currently being sent to more than 1,800 people, the publication reports campus affiliated service programs, short-term or one-time local volunteer opportunities, internships and jobs in the social service field, and announcements related to social service and volunteerism.

Passport to Houston

Rice undergraduate students connect with the city through the Passport to Houston, a program that provides METRO bus and light rail passes, memberships to various museums including the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, and the Museum of Natural Science, tickets to downtown performances like the Houston Symphony, and a rich collection of online information. In a demonstration of impact, the Passport to Houston recorded more than 46,000 boardings by Rice students on METRO rail and bus lines in the spring 2005 semester, a significant increase from before the program started in 2004.

“The best part of the Passport to Houston wasn’t how much money I saved (though that was nice), it was knowing the latest Houston opportunities and transportation options available to me. If I hadn’t gone to the Rice night at the symphony, I never would have known about the Randy Newman concert or the student discount tickets. If the bus routes to Hobby airport weren’t posted on the Passport site with detailed directions, times, and maps, I never would have taken advantage of that mode of public transit.”

—Rice undergraduate student

“Houston has a great deal more to offer our undergraduates than what they might learn in the classroom or laboratory. Indeed, we want our students to see Houston as perhaps one of the most important learning environments available to them while they are at Rice. Whether it is attending an exhibition in the world-class Museum District that neighbors our campus, participating in a public service internship with a government or nonprofit organization, or hopping the light rail to enjoy any number of Houston’s diverse cultural, athletic, and culinary offerings, Rice students must view this dynamic city as an integral part of their experience on an urban campus.”

—Rice president David W. Leebron
Civic Engagement and Community-Based Research

As part of Rice University’s engagement with Houston, the dean of undergraduates will establish a center to focus on community-based research opportunities for undergraduate students to work with community partners on issues of importance to the Houston area. Through community placements, Rice students will work to become better prepared for the rigors of academic research while also learning from community partners how to better be engaged citizens. Our Quality Enhancement Plan aims to leverage programs like the Passport to Houston to make the city a more important learning environment for our students during their time at Rice. See www.rice.edu/qep for more information.

The community-based research initiative builds on efforts already in place, like the Rice Building Workshop, to make Houston another classroom for our students.

A Focus on the Rice Building Workshop

The Rice University School of Architecture established the workshop to move students from classrooms into the community. The workshop has partnered with local nonprofit groups dedicated to issues of affordable housing, neighborhood revitalization, historic preservation, education, community services, and public art projects. More than 150 Rice students have participated in designing and building projects since 1997. More than 60 consultants, construction companies, craftspeople, and suppliers have contributed their skill, expertise, and materials.

“The most rewarding aspect of this project was being involved with the community. It has inspired me to seek future opportunities that will connect both my profession and community involvement and has reminded me that my role as an architect is much richer than simply designing projects.”

—Rice architecture student

“Our ability to serve and learn from Houston extends well beyond the offering of formal educational programs. Our city must form an integral part of the educational opportunity we offer to our students. A portion of our research endeavors must focus on the problems of Houston, from its educational challenges to its environmental problems, and we must play a part in solving those problems.”

—Rice president David W. Leebron
